Dear Ms. Keely Martin Bosler,

In accordance with the State Leadership Accountability Act (Leadership Accountability), the Labor and Workforce Development submits this report on the review of our internal control and monitoring systems for the biennial period ending December 31, 2019.

Should you have any questions please contact Jay Sturges, Associate Secretary, at (916) 653-9900, Jay.Sturges@labor.ca.gov.

GOVERNANCE

Mission and Strategic Plan

The Labor and Workforce Development Agency (Agency) was established in 2002 (see Government Code Sections 15550 – 15562) with the mission to provide leadership to protect and improve the well-being of California's current and future workforce. As the leader of an executive branch Agency, the Secretary is a member of the Governor's Cabinet. The Secretary oversees seven departments, boards and panels that serve California businesses and workers. These include:

- Employment Development Department (EDD)
- Employment Training Panel (ETP)
- California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board (CUIAB)
- Department of Industrial Relations (DIR)
- Agricultural Labor Relations Board (ALRB)
- Public Employment Relations Board (PERB)
- California Workforce Development Board (CWDB)

The work of the Agency covers seven main areas:

- Administering the collective bargaining statutes covering many of California's public-sector employees.
- Benefit administration, including workers' compensation, unemployment, disability and family leave insurance.
- Enforcement of California's labor laws to protect workers and create an even playing field for employers.
- Appellate functions related to employee benefits, regulations and enforcement in the workplace.
- Workforce development activities, including grant making for job training and coordination with other workforce development partners.

- Collection of employer-paid taxes.
- Economic development activities that lead to job creation and improved economic competitiveness.

The goals of the Agency are:

- Improve the operations, maintenance, and access to programs that protect and provide services to workers and employers.
- Improve the coordination of employment-related services.

Control Environment

As the head of the Labor and Workforce Development Agency, Julie Su, Secretary, is responsible for the overall establishment and maintenance of the internal control and monitoring systems.

The executive monitoring sponsor responsibilities include facilitating and verifying that the Labor and Workforce Development Agency internal control monitoring practices are implemented and functioning as intended. The responsibilities as the executive monitoring sponsor(s) have been given to Stewart Knox, Undersecretary.

The Agency sets the tone regarding ethical values and integrity to its seven departments, boards and panels that serve the State's businesses and workers. The Agency's overall structure encourages its staff to act independently and ethically in their engagement of all internal and external stakeholders to the State.

The Agency convenes regular meetings to review and discuss operational issues, risks, and mitigation strategies. This includes monthly meetings and ad hoc meetings for Agency executives, departmental leadership, middle management, and business unit staff. The Agency also reviews regular reports and performance metrics as part of its monitoring process.

All Agency business unit and executive staff are responsible for identifying new risks that fall within their area of expertise (legal, operational, administrative, policy, etc.) and reporting them to executive management. Executive staff are the "risk owners" of each assigned risk and are responsible for providing updates on potential/emerging risks, any ongoing monitoring efforts, and the effectiveness of controls in their areas.

The Agency requires its staff sign the Statement of Economic Interest form and complete Ethics Training. The Statement of Economic Interest form provides transparency and accountability for elected officials and public employees who make or influence governmental decisions to ensure they are making decisions in the best interest of the public and not enhancing their personal finances, as well as, avoid any conflict of interests.

The Agency actively works with its staff and the Governor's Office to ensure a competent workforce through evaluations and assessments to best develop existing staff for growth opportunities, as well as, provide training appropriate to the position. Appointments in the Agency are performance based and are evaluated on a mix of performance outcomes and project outcomes. Any deviations to performance expectations are addressed internally in a timely manner. The Agency recognizes the importance of staff development and encourages continual training and development to its entire staff.

To support Human Resource Management functions, the Agency contracts with the EDD for technical human resources and management services that includes, but not limited to, support for recruitment and retention activities; upward mobility and career guidance and labor relations. Additionally, the Agency utilizes the EDD Personnel Management Handbook which details all policies and procedures relating to personnel management including: codes of conduct; ethical requirements; staff development; staff development; employee performance and accountability; discipline; promotion; training and health and safety.

Information and Communication

Communication of monitoring roles and activities for management and staff is done through duty statements and through specific work assignments. Levels and areas of responsibility are documented in duty statements, organizational charts, policies and procedures, and work assignments.

The Agency has established a Risk Event Action Plan Template to guide the assessment, monitoring, and communication process. Vulnerabilities and control inefficiencies are typically communicated vertically during the regular business unit staff meetings and across program areas during executive management meetings. Controls may also be reported to executive management through e-mails, memos, and summary reports. The method of communication chosen depends on the type of issue, the urgency, the sensitivity, the complexity, and the breadth of the potential impact.

The Labor and Workforce Development Agency has implemented and documented the ongoing monitoring processes as outlined in the monitoring requirements of California Government Code sections 13400-13407. These processes include reviews, evaluations, and improvements to the Labor and Workforce Development Agency systems of controls and monitoring.

MONITORING

The information included here discusses the entity-wide, continuous process to ensure internal control systems are working as intended. The role of the executive monitoring sponsor includes facilitating and verifying that the Labor and Workforce Development monitoring practices are implemented and functioning. The responsibilities as the executive monitoring sponsor(s) have been given to: Stewart Knox, Undersecretary.

The Labor and Workforce Development Agency continuously monitors the effectiveness of internal control systems through routine Agency-wide meetings of executive-level staff and Agency technical staff. The Agency technical staff performs periodic reviews of its operational activities that are contracted through another department to ensure its accuracy and timeliness.

When potential vulnerabilities are identified, the Agency's executive level subject matter expert evaluates the risk, provides management with alternatives, and recommends controls to mitigate the vulnerability. The subject matter expert implements managements preferred mitigation strategy as soon as possible, generally within a week to 10 days, depending on the complexity of the issue. The subject matter expert then then provides regular and frequent monitoring updates until the executive team is comfortable that the vulnerability has been appropriately addressed.

RISK ASSESSMENT PROCESS

The following personnel were involved in the Labor and Workforce Development risk assessment process: executive management, front line management, and staff.

The following methods were used to identify risks: brainstorming meetings, ongoing monitoring activities, audit/review results, other/prior risk assessments, consideration of potential fraud, and performance metrics.

The following criteria were used to rank risks: likelihood of occurrence, potential impact to mission/goals/objectives, timing of potential event, potential impact of remediation efforts, and tolerance level for the type of risk.

The Agency's risk assessment process begins with a review of the Agency's enacting statutes that describe the mission and goals of the Agency and a review of the Agency's operations over the last several years. It includes a review of the Department of Finance's Guidance for Management's Evaluation of Controls document, Info-Tech's "Build a Business Driven IT Risk Management Program" and risks identified in the Agency's past FISMA/SLAA reporting processes as well as any subsequent CAPs. As a result of those reviews, regular executive management meetings that include discussions of existing and potential organizational risks and controls, as well as interviews and subsequent discussions with key Agency executives, the executive management team developed an updated list of risks.

Risks are then ranked using a matrix to define the risk severity, which is based on the potential severity of impact to the Agency's operations, the probability of occurrence, and an evaluation of the existing controls.

RISKS AND CONTROLS

Risk: Oversight, Monitoring, Internal Control Systems

The Agency is undergoing expansion and overseeing a reorganization of a key program area that spans several of its departments, panels and boards. As a result of these ongoing changes, the Agency is at risk of not continuing adequate monitoring of internal control systems. The dynamic process of the reorganization may cause temporary instances of unclear roles or lack of coordination among programs and organizational entities. Policies and procedures may not be current or established, or controls may not be effective, because of organizational changes.

Control: Ongoing Review and Evaluation

The Agency is committed to modifying and structuring its oversight and monitoring of internal control systems through ongoing reviews and evaluations of internal processes. This includes identifying a responsible point of contact for each department, panel or board and implementing a communication structure to enable direct communication to address program or organizational issues as they arise. Working groups for the reorganization meet at least weekly to share information and resolve issues.

Risk: Staff- Key Person Dependence, Workforce Planning

The Agency is at risk of not having sufficient institutional knowledge and experience in key program areas. This is a result of the Agency's structure, which includes a large number of the executive staff that are appointed by the Governor; senior executive staff have left and the new Governor has made several appointments in 2019. Due to the limited number of staff, the high volume of work, and the dynamic nature of the work at the Agency, the Agency relies heavily on executive staff to maintain the efficient operations of the Agency and the departments under the Agency. Without leadership, direction, guidance, and support from the Agency, Agency departments may insufficiently coordinate with other departments (both internal and external to the Agency) and as a result may perform inefficiently and ineffectively.

Control: Assessment and Documentation

The Agency's organizational structure, operational practices, and succession planning processes have been updated to minimize the impact of the loss of leadership, experience, and institutional knowledge that would have occurred otherwise when key individuals leave the Agency. These changes include revising and clarifying executive and business unit staff duties, adding staff to Agency's roster, development of existing employees for advancement into key roles, increased use of formalized training opportunities, and increased documentation of current and ongoing operational issues.

CONCLUSION

The Labor and Workforce Development strives to reduce the risks inherent in our work and accepts the responsibility to continuously improve by addressing newly recognized risks and revising risk mitigation strategies as appropriate. I certify our internal control and monitoring systems are adequate to identify and address current and potential risks facing the organization.
